Microscope Turned on Municipal Shortcomings When U. S. Health Officers Investigate - Many Serious Objections-May Restrict Troops to Park.

The sanitary conditions existing in Chattanooga and vicinity must be improved. This is not just hearsay, but it comes straight from the government officials. Everybody has got to get out and "clean up his own back yard."

The present insanitary conditions as they actually are here were laid before the mayor of the city, the city commissioners and a body of representative business men Monday afternoon by the United States health officials now stationed in this zone.

Maj. James L. Robinson, medical corps camp surgeon at Fort Oglethorpe, who has figured most prominently at several of the other camps in the medical department, gave a talk in which he outlined the necessity of the betterment of the sanitary conditions. He stated that unless these conditions are bettered the medical officers in charge would recommend that the soldiers be prohibited f.om coming to the city. This was done in order to impress the seriousness of the situation upon those representing all business centers of the city. Dr. C. P. Knight included in his report twelve subjects of the insanitary conditions in and around Chattanooga, which comes as a result of the department's investigation and most extensive work. Some of those named by Dr. Knight were:

Approximately 600 food establishments of which approximately 10 per cent, are in an approved condition. No sanitary supervision over barber shops.
